He has described the *thrill of being on the soccer field in front of 50,000 fans. "All the dreams (1) that you have for years come back in a reality and you are in front of so many people playing a match and you win, you lose. It's passion, it's courage." [あ]

His life in soccer came to a sudden end with a car crash the night before his 20th birthday. He was driving a (2) couple of friends home from a party when he lost control on a curve. The crash left him *clinging to life, *a nerve in his spine compressed. He was nearly *paralyzed from the chest down, and it took him several years to recover and to be able to walk again.

There were some (A) for Julio, but the turning point came when a nurse handed him a guitar. She thought (3) it would help him build strength in his fingers. He started to write little melodies and lyrics. His only audience, at first, was his mother and father, who, he says, loved his songs. [い]

His start in professional music came when he entered — and won — a singing and *songwriting contest in Spain. That (B) to a recording contract and to an album that hit No.1 in Spanish-speaking countries. And *the rest is history. [う]

He, Julio Iglesias, has now released more than 80 albums in 14 languages, sold more than 300 million records *worldwide, and earned the *status of an international *superstar.

Just *as he was *humble about his soccer playing, so he is also humble about his singing. Julio has said his voice is "not that great."
